Because of SISKIN HOSPITAL...

I can climb mountains.

In 2008, active freshman David Wilson and his friends sought shelter from a tornado that swept through Union University, when the building came crashing down around them. After being trapped under 28 feet of debris for nearly five hours, David was left with a collapsed lung and severe crush injuries to both legs.

Unable to walk or even move his legs or feet, he arrived at Siskin Hospital with a strong determination to walk and return to his active lifestyle once more. His resolve, along with his faith and family, and the care he received at Siskin Hospital, helped to make that determination a reality when he walked out the front doors only a few weeks later...but for David, walking was just the beginning. Step-by-step, he has returned to doing the active things he loves, like snow skiing, running, and hiking through the woods with his new wife, Christen. Now enrolled in medical school, he plans to spend his life helping others, and that leaves David feeling on top of the world.

Because of Siskin Hospital, I CAN.
